Letter from the President

At its core, the Salem Athenæum is a membership library which serves the literary and cultural interests of Salem and the North Shore. It is also an experience—for me, it is the peace and respite that I feel in the building and garden, together with the opportunity to be with a special community of fascinating people. We all treasure an Athenæum experience, one that inspires us to work together and create the best Athenæum for now and for the future.

Preservation of our building, garden and collections, management of our financial health, and outreach to a community of intellectually curious people are the fundamental duties of the Trustees. Pursuant to these goals and drawing on the planning efforts of prior boards and conversations with our members and friends, the Trustees established a new 3-year strategic plan for 2014–2016 with four objectives and I am pleased to report our progress:

- Expand programming and broaden audience participation that cements the Athenæum's role as a cultural and learning center for the North Shore: Best-selling novelist Brunonia Barry joined the board to lead a new initiative offering programs for young people and aspiring and established writers alike with the goal of the Athenæum becoming the writer's center on the North Shore.
- Revise By-laws and governance processes to better align the Athenæum Board and its work with the needs of the Athenæum: In February, the Proprietors approved By-Laws changes recommended by the Trustees to: increase the size of the board; allow up to 5 Subscribers to serve as Trustees; and extend term limits to three 3-year terms.
- Maintain and extend access to the Athenæum's important historical collections and building and grounds: Near-term needs have been identified with repairs already underway to the garden gate, boiler, and Rare Book Room.
- Increase financial support from individuals, businesses and grant sources: We successfully inaugurated a corporate sponsorship program with the participation of five businesses.

Finally, the experience of the Athenæum that we each enjoy would not be possible without the dedicated service of our Director Jean Marie Procius, so many committed, talented volunteers and our truly working Board of Trustees. The continued vibrant life of the Athenæum relies upon the support of our sponsors and so many of you who have given generously throughout the year to the Athenæum. Thank you.

As we mark the 204th year of the Salem Athenæum, we hope you will join us in celebrating all that the Athenæum stands for and means to you so that the Athenæum will endure through the 21st century and beyond.

Meg Twohey
President, Board of Trustees

Letter from the Director

The Salem Athenæum has become synonymous with captivating educational programs, a thoughtfully curated collection of reading material, and a beautiful place for members and friends to gather. Our members are the force that keeps our programs and interest groups vibrant and growing, and their enthusiasm both expands our community and deepens the engagement of those involved.

In 2013, the 150th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation sparked a coordinated suite of programming in the form of an exhibit, lectures, tours and carefully chosen books from our collection, that taken together, reveal once again the rich depth of the collections and their relevance to the North Shore in the 21st century. We continue working hard to make our collections accessible and approachable, through the electronic catalog project (now in its fifth year), as well as through a physical re-organization of the shelves to secure valuable collections and promote ease of use of the circulating collection.

This year also showed us that we have further work to do in considering how to balance access to the collections, with our obligation to steward the volumes in our care. In the course of updating our insurance appraisal, we discovered the theft of a rare and valuable book. This violation of trust, though disconcerting, is an opportunity for the Athenæum to think more deeply about the long-term care and curation of our most culturally significant assets. In the coming year we anticipate refining our security model to give us an added layer of assurance, while not unduly restricting the access to the collections that our members have enjoyed.

Security from theft is one aspect of the work being planned for the safeguarding of the collections. We will be undertaking short-term repairs to mitigate asbestos and repair damaged plaster in the Rare Book Room. Next steps include engaging professional services to plan the best physical environment controls for the collections and for the entire building so that we may comfortably enjoy the Athenæum throughout the year.

We invite you to join us, to visit often and enjoy the treasures found in the collections and the fellowship of the members. Thank you for your continued generosity which sustains and makes the Athenæum what it is today and shapes what it can be for future generations.

Annual Report of Activities

- The first class of conserved volumes in the new Adopt-a-Book program and their sponsors were feted at the Conservation Night in June. Conservators Stephanie Gibbs and Peter Geraty educated the audience about the work completed and answered questions about the volumes slated for repair and restoration. A second class of 13 volumes were sponsored by the generous members and friends whose gifts totaled $9,300.
- The Athenæum hosted the Summer Salon Series on Friday evenings throughout July and August. Lively discussions and a jovial atmosphere punctuated the presentations on a range of topics including publishing e-books, olive oil, and Jane Austen.
- Two summer interns, Conner Smith of Endicott College and Indiana Girolamo of Salem State University, along with library volunteers Phil Dwight, Mary Costello, and Rich O'Keeffe, entered over 3,000 titles into the on-line catalog, bringing the project to 30% completion.
- The Athenæum participated in Salem Haunted Happenings this year: we marched in the opening parade (Books Come Alive theme), and held a course on classic horror by Sue Schopf, The Scientist and the Monster.
- We welcomed 45 new member families. Membership continues measured but steady growth over the past decade.
- In connection with the 150th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation, our Fall exhibition, Abolitionists!, featured major local figures of the abolitionist movement, paying particular attention to the role of female and African-American abolitionists in Salem.
- The Athenæum hosted Treasures of the Pacific, a special exhibit of artifacts from the Phillips House's Oceania and Polynesia collection and our Travel and History collection. Susan Leavitt presented a lecture on the artifacts. This was co-sponsored with Historic Salem and Historic New England.
- The Board of Trustees participated in a series of strategic planning sessions with a professional consultant that resulted in revisions to the Bylaws approved by the Proprietors in a special meeting on February 19, 2014.
- In their strategic planning work, the Board of Trustees refined and agreed upon the Athenæum's Mission Statement, Vision Statement, and Positioning Statement.

- SalemFive, Beverly Cooperative Bank, Boston Private Bank & Trust Company, Eastern Bank, and Soucy Insurance Agency were underwriters of our education programs this year. Their sponsorships totaling $5,500 helped to bring special programming about the abolition movement as well as information on current topics.
- The Writers' Committee was formed to meet the needs of our literary community. This new committee proposes to make the Salem Athenæum the writers' center of the North Shore by supporting ongoing programs for developing authors.
- Special tours of the building and collections were given on two New Members Nights, to visiting groups of Boston tour guides, the Beacon Hill Scholars, Historic Salem's "Salem and the Abolitionist Movement" walking tour, and Salem Education Foundation's "Hats Off to Education Day." Introductions to the Athenæum are given on an as-requested basis during library hours to tourists, potential members and to any interested parties.
- The Communications Committee developed a bimonthly Postcard Schedule Reminder to promote various events and programs to complement the quarterly electronic newsletter.
- Elaine von Bruns and Marla Gearhart completed the re-organization of volumes in the Rare Book Room, which continues a multi-year program of shifting the collection to safeguard the historical collections and maximize storage capacity.
- Elaine and Marla also confirmed that we have a complete first edition of the Oxford English Dictionary (published in fascicles from 1884-1928).
- We have had an inspection by a HVAC manufacturer and plan to engage conservators and engineering consultants to recommend a long-term solution for our Collection space.
- Our aged gas fired burner failed to operate multiple times over the winter, resulting in unplanned closings of the building and emergency repairs. Plans for its replacement are scheduled for spring 2014.
- Eighty-seven members and friends volunteered their time at events and more have given generously by donating refreshments, supplies, professional services and advice, and thousands of books for the book sale.
- Trustee Ken Harris entertained the crowd at this year's St. Patrick's Day fundraiser as Friar Fergus, a jocular character with a penchant for breaking into song. The annual March party drew a large crowd of members and friends to enjoy good company and toast the arrival of spring.
